

SONNY HEDGECOCK | HP

gets guitar instruction from Patrick Lui at the Music Discovery Camp Wednesday at St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

Music camp brings worlds together

HICKLE-EDWARDS
RSE STAFF WRITER

It takes only three ining young people from world together.

ending Music Discov-St. Mary's Episcopal week are taking lessons nal musicians in pi-violin. They range in 8 to 11 and are from as China, Cuba and show what they've performance, open to Friday.

Students are united by musicians.

ed the violin, so I have to play," Mary Koch ke the piano the best.

WANT TO GO?

What: Music Discovery Camp performance

When: 11:30 a.m. Friday

Where: St. Mary's Episcopal Church, 108 W. Farriss Ave.

Admission: Free, open to the public though, because it is the easiest. The violin is the hardest and it hurts your chin."

The camp is an extension of the church's year-around music academy, and it serves as an outreach ministry.

The one-week session is free for students. Another session will be held at the end of the month.

Students complete one class daily in each of the three instruments, get three meals and attend a concert by more advanced musicians.

Campers also are invited to perform short pieces they have learned throughout the week at these concerts.

"The students are so excited to learn," Margaret McDonald, program leader, said. "Some of them show up at seven in the morning.
They are so eager to soak up the learning experience."

Students were recruited for the program with the help of the Latino Family Center and the Guilford County Schools' English as a Second Language teachers. Recruiters looked for international students with an interest in music who were unable to afford private lessons.

Volunteers from the church also provide everything from time to food.
Many of the volunteers are high school students who help with administration and assist teachers.

Students will be awarded certificates and their own copy of the piano books they have studied. Five students will get scholarships to study at the church's music academy throughout the year.

"Music, it's said, is the universal language," McDonald said.

"It's really true, and we prove it here at the camp.

"The children are from different backgrounds and schools, but they can come together for a week and play cooperatively and there is never any problem."